FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES:

For individuals interested in academic careers, the Department supports five fellowship programs. Areas of ACGME-accredited study include dermatopathology, Neuropathology, cytopathology, and hematopathology. A non-ACGME accredited fellowship in Gastrointestinal and Liver Pathology is also offered. Admission to fellowship training is competitive. Other extramural sources of fellowship support sought by the Department include the American Cancer Society, American Heart Association, Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, American Diabetes Association and College of American Pathologists- Scholars Award Program. In the past several years, many of our residency program graduates have pursued fellowship training and/or careers in Academic health centers. Residents interested in pursuing a fellowship at the completion of their training should apply through the Teaching Office by requesting an application.
